ASB recognizes material selection is one of the first steps in the product development cycle and a critical component to the design and manufacture of your medical device initiatives.

Specializing in polyurethane technology, we offer our commitment to providing the highest levels of material reliability, consistent product performance and a consultative partnership directed at meeting your design objectives.

In addition to our polycarbonate and polyether based thermoplastic urethanes and elastomers, hydrophilic materials, bonding agents, liquid polymers and antimicrobial products, we offer supporting technical services including prototype coatings, colorant technologies and project management collaboration to meet your delivery expectations and project timelines.

ASB...your source for advanced material science technology.
